There is also the matter of..... Some of you do not want constructive criticism. You want praise.

We all know that everyone loves positive feedback on their art, but there is nothing wrong with constructive criticism as long as we end our comments with something positive. After all we want to encourage artists, not discourage them. There is always something interesting about someone's style or technique. So basically always end a negative comment with positive encouragement. After all, who doesn't like a pat on the back every now and then?
