

Forum: HM General Chit Chat

Topic: Cloverfield

Subject: Re: Cloverfield

Posted by: Winterhawk

Posted on: 2008/1/21 12:09:12

I haven't seen the movie yet, but I have to say, with the sheer volume of information and trailers, hype, talk and buzz about this movie, how on earth could DD not know what sort of movie he was going to go see and how it was made. Everything I have seen about the show it has been pretty clear that this show is about a group of friends trying to survive a monster attack in New York filmed from their own point of view. I know personally that I will pretty much like this movie but I will wait for it to be on dvd because I know I would get sick from the camera motions with such a big screen. I am still looking forward to the show though, but I also know exactly what I am getting into and find it quite hard to believe that someone wouldn't.

And Wasmith, Star Trek, those movies blow

I used to watch star trek a lot on tv. I recently saw some of the Next generation episodes and they suck hard. I remember liking them, I then thought maybe I should watch some of the originals. They sucked even harder. Lastly I watched a couple of movies. They sucked More than Jr at a sheep farm. It seems star trek is not nearly as good as I remember it being. it is a shame really as I used to really like it. I guess I just outgrew it. I wonder what Other shows and movies I remember liking a lot suck now.