well that was sort of cool, but it doesn't have Heromorph, comics2film, daz3d, renderosity, animotions, deviantart, comicspace, artzone or any of the other cool sites that I visit from time to time.

Also they put comics in the kids section, so they assume anyone that likes comics or is interested in comics is a kid.....

those bastards.

besides DD, don't you have like 5 threads that you have stated up with just one link to a site in each of them. Why not reply to one of those threads when you find a new link. that way you get 3 benefits.

benefit one. people can find it easier if the thread goes off the front page.

benefit two. all the links are in one place and other people could possibly add to the same thread giving you new links as well.

benefit three. when the automatic forum pruning occurs twice a year thread with more then 4 replies that are more then a month old get automatically pruned out of the forum, if you shared your links in one thread this would be less likely to happen.
