i don't see why people are throwing a stink about the merger... I mean it was this way years ago. then people complained about wading through to find what they like and other factors caused the seperate galleries for a clean and streanlined site.

Personaly I think this way. artist can get inspired by others, can look at something, and if theyahve an idea how to help, even if they themselves don't know the medium they could refer the new kid to some one in that medium that knows a thing or two to offer an opinionas to how they can improve if they want to.

But I do agree, with the merger it would be a great idea to:

limit 1 image per artist per day

A sentance or two for the details. (lets face it if the image is good it speaks for it's self, and it should let the viewer draw their own interperatation as all art does)

Rough sketches and unfinished should be in the threads and Hellfire.
