I was quite surprised that MJ died.

I find it funny that his career had all but completely died in the past few years due to his strangeness and alleged boy touching. I liked some of his songs in the 80's but truthfully hadn't cared about his music in a long long time. It will be interesting to see if "the king of pop" will be remembered for his music or his antics.

Just think about it. a week ago if someone mentioned him, the first thing that would come to mind propably wasn't his music. I know it wasn't for me. I always thought it was strange that he went from a black man to a white woman over the years.
