I don't sketch nearly as much as I should. The short version of my method is that I'll write a page (while considering where I want to be on the next page, within 5 pages and at the end of the story) and then lay out the dialogue on a blank page in Photoshop and try to visualize the panels. I like using Poser rather than a sketch pad as it allows me to change poses, distance, camera angle, etc...on the fly as I try to work out what'll work best for each panel.
