I really like using this in CS4 as well for what they had it in there for. Looks much more in depth and useful here in CS5 though, since they expanded on it.

Probably won't be an upgrade here for me either unfortunately though. Least not right away.

Especially for work purposes which is too bad. We upgraded these 2 years ago at the end of CS3 which is what we got, combine that with all new Mac Pro's at the same time, with extended drive space and memory. Which if I price the packages I usually have to price about 26 of these or so, don't think they will go for it. Maybe I could talk them into just me since, well dare I say it... "I need it." None the less very impressive tool. Can't wait. Will get my hands on it eventually here. Thanks for sharing.
