Thomas Hayden Church is the actors name. He's not all that bad, check out some of his stuff post Wings, one of which is Tombstone.

I got to wonder how they can build a whole movie around the Sandman being the villian though? Maybe he'll be working for Harry aka Green Goblin II.

But that leads me to another question. Why is it that in movies all supervillians have to be working with each other, or at least pretending to be? That was the worst part of the Batman sequels. Why couldn't you open the movie (in this case Spiderman III) with a minor villian, say Shocker, holding hostages at a bank. Spidey swings in and kicks his sorry @$@ and bang! opening credits and we never hear from Shocker again. Not every villian needs to have his or her motivations explained.
