I don't know man. I checked out her website. Looked through her artwork. Basing what I've seen from others, her stuff isn't "great", but she appears to have some talent. I'm not sure the need for 200 illustrators but at 500 buck a pop, that's what? 100K. That be alot of money for her to take and run. If it sounds to good to be true, it probably is. Personally, I would check her out thoroughly before 'investing' any money. And I mean calling her and talking to her personally, having her send more information, a detailed work up of where the money is going and for what. Check prices of what she plans to use it for, check her background out, if it means police check, then do it. If everything is legit and you have the money, and it interests you...then do go for it. But tread carefully. I have not received any email from her, but I do occaisionally get those scammers from Africa. If you are looking to do comic books and get published, why not go over to Boldcomicsstudios and join our team, we don't ask for money up front, although that may change at some point. Good luck.
