

Forum: Comic Book Corner

Topic: Katma Tui Fanthread

Subject: Re: Katma Tui Fanthread

Posted by: Thayne

Posted on: 2006/3/16 10:07:39

So there I was 18 and in my senior year. I go to the comic shop and see a plethora of comics as well as comic book companies. And what assaults the eyes and dominates the shelves the most?! Gimmicks.....

Why the hell did they have to have like 6 different covers of spiderman? Yeah, nice drawing, good story, but I don't need the silver/multitransforming/does my laundry cover. And nor do you need to baggage it up with trading cards, holograms, 85 yr old sticks of gum, or used backscratchers!

And what's with them foolz that go to the store and grab like 13 copies of the same issue? They make me sick. No appreciation for art or the story whatsoever. All they know is wait four months and that 4 issue miniseries first print will be worth 60 bux each. They might actually read ONE. The rest get sealed and wait for the ebay vaseline exercise. And one never gets touched at all!

I read comics for the stories and the art. Not because someone blinded me in the left toe knuckle with a silver edition 1st issue never before seen sold on the black market wrapped in triple aluminum pepsi alloy ShadowHawk! And what a lame @$$ comic THAT was. Just gimme the freakin art and tell me a good story dammit! This ain't Harlequinn by Eddie Munster!