Since we already have a thread for how people came up with their names, I thought it might be cool to hear the stories of how you all ended up here in the first place. How did you find Heromorph? Why are you still here? And what's that thing in the fridge? ...errr...never mind that last one... As for myself, I remember seeing an article in Wizard magazine (it was a few years back...) about comic photomanipulation. I checked out whatever site the article was about (which was not Heromorph), and thought the stuff there was pretty cool. When I went back sometime later, the site was gone. One web search later, I found myself at Heromorph. At first I was just a lurker, then I found out that the computer I was using had CorelDraw on it, and in no time, I was making my own "hero morphs". And here I am today... But that's enough about me....next!
