do you own gen-x?

Did you take the pictures that you manipped?

Did you post them on the site making them public domain?

Did you know that there is a rule on the site saying if you post an image here you are allowing us to use it to promote the site/awards/and decorations? It has been that way for a very long time. ( I do not feel like looking it up because frankly I do not care, but in the rule threads somewhere is a post talking about banners and themes, asking people to post a message if they do not want to take part. Since joining the site and clicking yes that you agree to and will read all of the site rules and that you will follow them, I am sure you have read this post.)

That is why it was used, that is why no message was sent.

And now that is why it was removed. For not making a post in around a year then making 2 passively aggressive posts about the same thing makes the point. your image is no longer being used.

End of Story.
