now on to the show...

Imagine what it would look like if you had the idea first? This isn't a revamp or redesign of a character. It's what you would come up with if you had the idea for say Spiderman or Batman or whoever first.

Maybe you see Spidey as horror, or the Xmen as something on the order of "used to be human". Whatever it is make it completely unique.

Due by Saturday, June 3rd, 11:59 pm (wherever you are)

Bonus Criteria: Display emotion appropriate to the character you create.
