Origins:
Womanhood is the daughter of an earthborn union between Aphrodite and Dionysus. As such (the daughter of gods yet who lives on the earth), she seems to switch roles between mortal and Goddess at will. She has traits of both her mythical parents, easily consumed with lust and anger as well a deep and abiding love and a freedom of emotion. She is typically civil, a giver and protector of laws and a lover of peace. However, she can at times be characterized as vain, ill-tempered and easily offended. Quite succinctly, Womanhood is fickle.

Her strengths and abilities have never properly been measured. However, it is well known that Hell hath no fury as Womanhood scorned!
