I guess she would work. She has the body and the acting credits. I just wonder why they picked a blonde for Wonder Woman. Lots of hair dye.

Well for one, I'd say because hair dye is dirt cheap.

Two, it's more important to get a good actress that suits the part than another actress who perhaps looks more the part but can't act as well.

It happens all the time in Hollywood. Kirsten Dunst as MJ; she looked fake as a redhead and Kate Bosworth as Lois Lane; better but she looks better as a blonde. The hair color is a minor change if done right. Is she right for the part? As a solo movie--maybe. She's 32 now, so isn't she a bit old for a multiple movie franchise? It could be 4 or 5 years between movies. Five years is a huge difference in Hollywood, especially for an "ageless" character like WW. Unless Joss is planning to film the sequels at the same time, like Lord of the Rings, he'd need a new WW for each installment.
