Yes, it does happen all the time. And it pisses me off. There are sooo many skilled actresses out there...are they telling us that there's not as single brunette actress who can do the job? I don't have anything against her, she's good looking and can act a little bit.

But maybe Hollywood casting directors should learn to look a bit beyond the usual dozen actresses when chosing one to play a part with such clearly defined and known looks. It seems like thy just want big names to slap on those posters and ads. Like with the casting of the new Joker. Or MJ.
