Pretty much what WH said.

I've also got a Wacom, it was easy to install and I've never had any problems with it.

Mine's also 4x5 inch and that's a good size (doesn't take up the whole desk). After you start using it you'll discover how it is different from drawing and the area on the tablet represents your whole screen (sounds odd, but it works).

Only thing I would suggest is get familiar using a mouse with your new software before using a tablet.

If you're unfamiliar with both your software and the tablet it will be a much harder learning curve.
