Cool.

What happens if we draw something for the comic gallery that isn't meant to have any color, though?

I'm not asking to sound like a jackass or anything, I'd just like to avoid complications because there are times when we'll draw something (drawn, inked, scanned, etc.) and consider it finished without having any color.

Some examples...

It would be nice to be able to display it somewhere that it's going to be seen by everyone in order to get a wider range of feedback. Are we no longer allowed to post these in the more frequented galleries, or do we need to make an addendum that it is, in fact, a finished image?

Plus, is the HFACG still going to be available for WIP drawings or is that off limits as well?

Again, this isn't meant to be aggravating or confrontational. I'm just looking for a clarification.

Oh, and thank God no one thought to call the new forum "The Doodle Den"...
