Alright, I'm putting up the basic shading exercises.

White on one side, black on the other fill in the rest of the squares with the transitional shades.

Next use an unlined rectangle and start at the black end and just shade in progressively lighter all the way to the white end. Be as subtle in your transitions as you can. Also, be sure to use a soft pencil.

After that, then just maybe you will be ready for a sphere...

btw Jr, they are called tortillions or blending stumps.
