I think they both have used the same names. But the concepts behind the characters are completely different. I mean, DC had a character named Firebird that was pretty much the female equivalent to Firestorm. (though I've also heard they changed that character's name to Firehawk) And Marvel had a character named Firebird that was a Native American chick who was in the Avengers.

Then there's also the whole court battle that happened over Captain Marvel. In which case, one company owns the name and the other company owns the character.
