Im my opinion an artist sould create what he or she like to do. They should do their art for themselves first. If they do something they like, changes are someone else probably will like it too.

I've seen some good people loose their way because they tried to make what they though people would like.

But if everybody like the same thing, this would be a very very boring world to live in...

Personally, I don't post my stuff waiting to get a lot of hits or comments or whatever... If someone like it and make a comment, that's great, but I only post something when I'm happy with it or can't do it better and hopefully someone give me some tips how to do better.

There are some Masters here that I admire and that's the kind of stuff I wish to do some day...in due time.

Oh Yeah, and keep big boobs pics coming, that's why I'm a Chup@cabra fan.
