Every so often I go on a comment binge. Not as often as some of you would like, apparently. But they usually amount to 200 comments or more in a day.

How much more can you say than "Great Job!! Keep it up!! Who's the model?"

On some, it is mind bogglingly clear what you can say. On others, you've typed yourself out and are left with said comment.

There is also the matter of..... Some of you do not want constructive criticism. You want praise. This issue gets kind of sticky because people start talking about "how it was said". My personal feelings are that no matter how polite I am someone will get angry because I didn't say what you wanted to hear.

In my case, I tried to get to know the other artists here a little better. Knowing a little something of them helps me to not lose my mind when people like Jr flat tell me when my stuff is trash. There's also the benefit of getting the chance to work with your betters. And learning something from it.
