My issue with this is that I normally only comment on stuff that I think is really well done, and not even all of that. I personally don't feel comfortable in public telling someone what I think is wrong with their work unless it's some minor deal in an otherwise great pic.

I've tried art on a tablet, tried photoshopping, photomanipulation, etc. I collect art, and I know what I like. That's the perspective I come from - someone who appreciates art, and knows how tough it is to do some of that stuff, because I've tried and really don't have the skills. So I tend to be more encouraging than critiquing.

Also, another small issue at times - I've left a comment, but it didn't 'take'. If it doesn't show after a few times, I usually give up.
