I have mixed feelings about this. I think unions really helped the workers at one time, but that was when working conditions were horrid. Now, I fear they've made companies move out of the country for manufacturing. The consequence of that is to have toys that contain GHB in them. Why does that sound like something Toyman would do??

As far as the writers' strike, actors get residuals, so the writers should as well. The internet and DVDs are a new frontier, so it should be fair. Still, it doesn't cost much to make DVDs, so one wonders why they are so expensive. We may see the price of them go up even more now, because of the strike.
