That's not entirely true. More or less it's the other way around that you have problems. Not every pose designed for one particular character will work for another but most times it comes so close that just a push or pull this way or that will get the results you want.
As for your problem Hub. If you indeed have Poser content there is a pose that may help you along the path to acheiving what you want. Follow this path...Poses/Poser 1-5/Sculpture Sets, use the Hercules Archer pose. This is pretty good for an archery scene...his lower torso and legs are bent different than what you like but it'll be easier posing them for you than adjusting the upper arms and hands. It'll work well with M3.

Thanks starchild will try that.
