We are currently trying to get the servers records of bandwidth usage for our virtual server package and all the sites that we host on it to compare it to our own and to see if there is any differences. We have made multiple requests in the past few days and so far have been ignored at this point.

We want to see if their logs and records compaire with the ones that we have of our own.

I am pretty sure the hosts realize they are being cocksuckers but they have overloaded the server that we rent so they are unable to honour contracts such as ours, so instead of dealing with the overload themselves. they decided to look at the popular sites on the server that are stopping hem from overloading and extort them.

Nothing new will really be happening, we looked at our logs for the site and took action to impact the bandwidth and resource use. Until we either find a new host that will meet both our pricing and hosting needs, or work out something with our current hosts. The way the site was was actually with in the scope of our agreement as far as we can tell we have not done anything wrong but to keep the site online in the interm we made some changes. because a little heromorph is better then no heromorph.
