Of course the news wouldn't tell us the whole story. Sensationalism rules their worlds via ratings and sales. If they tell the whole story, it doesn't really seem like anyone is getting reamed or being jerks. If they only tell one side of it, the public gets in an uproar supporting the media's side and tune in for updates on the evil villians who dared do something to someone else. Unless you do the reseach, you don't really know what is going on and any opinions is based off of conjecture and hearsay. Not that I ever bother to research something for the sole pupose of having an informed opinion on it.
