Sure the writers are selfish because the movie studios are making money off their work and they want a piece of it. Just like the studios greedily shafted the writers by not including them in the new revenue stream because of the contracts in place they could. Of course if you are worried they will charge more now, don't. It's not like they weren't planning on charging you more anyway.

Unless you are members of the WGA or an employer of them, why would you even give a crap?
