

Forum: HM General Chit Chat

Topic: Writers Guild of America Strike

Subject: Re: Writers Guild of America Strike

Posted by: Darkwinter999

Posted on: 2008/1/4 6:54:46

Moir and Chilly, you both seem like fanatical extremists. No offence, but I think it's people like you two (highly opinionated and deadset on winning) that make trivial arguments like this come to blows or wars. Taking sides is sounding more and more dangerous all the time, but I want add a little something that I haven't heard yet. This is the reason that I don't like thinking too hard on solutions to the issue of all the cr@p Hollywood churns out. Focus groups. They are trying to please way too many people and end up pissing off everyone. They take a kick@ss concept, through in a talking cat for the kids, a hasbeen actor for the older crowd, lots of angst and shipping for the teen girls and a hot young actress for all the men, but give her a brain for the older women. Then they slap on a script present it with a well cut teaser. So what have you got? A piece of sh!t that you noone knows sucks until you're halfway through the movie and already paid 10 bucks for it. Boxoffice thinks it's a hit wonder why everyone is complaining. Solution? Screw the WGA strike, WE need to strike. Not that anyone will, mindless garbage is as addicting as nicotine and many people secretly like it.