Since you guys seem so fixated on this (these) topic(s), I thought I'd put my two c's in. I think the best analysis comes from John Cusack's musing in the movie "Hi-Fi".

When I draw or manipulate a figure for HM, I try to make it titillating - but always real (except, of course, for Pamela Anderson). Never bigger than the head and relative to an athletic body (e.g., ribcage has to support the rack; hips have to support the butt). I invariably think "what kind of bra would she wear?" for this costume.
