

Forum: HM General Chit Chat

Topic: HeroBreasts!

Subject: Re: HeroBreasts!

Posted by: Hardbody

Posted on: 2008/5/9 0:16:54

Lest break this down:

1) Excessive Cleavage sells, so bigger bosoms equals bigger profits.

2) Save for May Parker, Big Bertha (of the Great Lakes... whatever they're calling themselves currently), Death (Marvel's depiction), and Hela (Loki's Daughter in Marvel), only prepubescents and background characters are meant to not be "superhuman" in body as well as in powers... and Bertha is both ends of the spectrum as she is either model thin and flat or excessively bulging everywhere(but that includes her face, arms, belly, and everywhere else) at once...

3) Comics are Fantasy/Fiction, not reality, before you try to break down why the women are more than humanly possible, why not figure out how an invisible person can see, a person can fly without any visible means of propulsion, and if the Thing's Thing spurts pebbles? They're far more reality breaking or thought evoking topics than why Powergirl's 34H's are so ridiculous even though Penthouse had a centerfold who had her exact figure many years ago.

4) Everyone is complaining about gravity, well DC may have the biggest and most massive, but no one has mentions DC's blatant addressing of the subject in Young Justice #1 with Nina Dowd after her transformation... who has not a single 3D Art, Photomanip, or Comic Art image done of her... Poor Mighty Endowed, she can't even stand on her own and yet she gets no support from the artists here either.

So why argue over the T&A when there are more important topics to discuss, and bigger and better T&A unscene out there, and images to sell, and beauty to appreciate?