After reading this post and checking out these sites and some others, I've decided that using logos or banners on our work is the only way to at least maintain our credit on our pics. I did this for a while and stopped but it looks like the only way to keep someone else from claiming my work as their own is to resume. For those pieces that did have a logo or some kind of label, they are still there. These folks are too lazy to crop out any IDs. Admittedly, some of these folks aren't claiming ownership, but they aren't giving credit either.
