brick and i have pretty much laid out the image, agreed on characters, and an overall atmosphere to the piece. he started whipping up some stuff for his character and i just got my first pass done on my character. we swap the images back and forth and see what the other thinks and steer in that direction.

overall, a very positive experience.

as far as why more of us don't come over here to play....honestly it's just my surfing habit. i'm used to hitting C2F daily and posting. i'm sure it's also a feeling of loyalty to the site as well, it's where i've always gone and posted. not that there is anything wrong with heromorph (in my opinion you guys were hit a little to hard by some of our artists, it's the net for god's sake...if someone can sell their kidney on ebay....then you better bet someone will steal your work and post it...and in some cases claiming it as theirs), it's just c2f has always been home. i can still come over here and play, as long as you will have me.
