You know I haven't seen "The Scarecrow of Romney marsh" since I first saw it on "The Wonderful World of Disney" so many years ago.

It always struck me as something of a "Revolutionary War Era" Batman (he even had his own kid sidekick, didn't he?).

The Prisoner was an interesting show (if confusing as hell with its final episode). I'm suprised in this era of remakes that they didn't try to remake it as a movie or new TV series before he passed away (I could see him with a cameo at least as an old prisoner or one of those running the Village).
