For the record though, I did go see it with my dad who is a huge fan of ToS and was alive to watch it when it was a regular series and he loved it. He's two years older than you by the way, Wolf. (have I made you feel old enough yet?)

Look, you young punk, I was walking through 6 foot snow drifts, in minus 15 degree weather, during a blizzard, to get to kindergarden when I was your age!

Seriously...like I said, I was there for TOS, NextGen, DS-9, Voyager, and "The-One-We-Don't-Talk-About"...

So, yes, I'm old. I've got kidney stones, prostate troubles, and a serious crush on Power Girl and Catwoman! I have no problems with the storyline...the music...or the freaking Star Wars people who showed up looking for 'Golden Boy' to finally get killed (think they were talking about C3-PO)

My prob, like I said, was with the Kirk / Spock mix-up. I agree that it is / was an alternative universe. But there are some things that you just don't mess with!

Anyway...I'm going to go see it again (my older sister is buying the tickets) and I'll try to have an open mind..."PROMISE"
