

Forum: HM General Chit Chat

Topic: Web design help, does anyone have experience with this?

Subject: Re: Web design help, does anyone have experience with this?

Posted by: Winterhawk

Posted on: 2009/6/4 8:06:58

A few things you can do.

1 is host your images on image shack and then hot link them to the webspace code. if you are using html the code doesn't care if the images are on the same webspace or somewhere else as long as they are online.

This will free up huge amounts of webspace for you.

the next thing you can do is sign up for multiple free account make different free accounts and use the different webspaces for different sections of the site and just link between them. I have done this with multiple sites I had in the past before I actually had real webspace. as long as you code everything correctly. once a person finds your homepage and uses your links they will never notice the difference.