So Bruce Wayne is dead. Big deal. Does this really surprise anyone? Wasn't this expected at some point and time? Will anyone really care except for the veteran Bat-fans? Superman died so did Cap, why should Bats be exempt? But really who's gonna miss Bruce Wayne? Do you think people love the Batman because of his alterego? No way. We could care less who's behind the mask just as long as he delivers the same type of no-nonsense justice to the maniacs of Gotham as did his predecessor. Remember Micheal keaton played batman in the movie and people loved him but who really gave a crap about his role as Bruce Wayne. Besides its high time DC injected some youth into its characters that have been around since the stone-ages. Of course he'll be back should sales dip, but for now I say let Dick have the mantle, he's certainly earned his chance at it.
