

Forum: Comic Book Corner

Topic: My Wardrobe Malfunction

Subject: Re: My Wardrobe Malfunction

Posted by: drunkendragon

Posted on: 2009/7/23 15:35:17

I think a lot might have been kidding.

But there are those out there who feel that there is only room for one opinion on any subject...theirs. While that may be the way a lot of the world is run as far as politics goes...I think the analogy in this case is flawed.

I believe that the comic/art community is probably the best place to see through that flaw.

For Example, I haven't seen many morphers here who haven't dabbled in more than just the DC or Marvel worlds. Most have done beautiful representations, or sarcastic spoofs of both universes equally.

There is much that can be drawn from both.

Heck, even the two Big Guns themselves borrow from each other regularly.

How much fun would they have made of you if you wore an "Amalgam Comics" T-shirt?

Bet you would have drawn an entirely different set of comments from the same people who kiddingly objected to your ensemble. My guess is it would have sparked comments on the specific Amalgam characters, but no references to elephants and asses.

Still, that must have been fun.