hey kids,

just rented a REAL interesting movie called MAN BITES DOG aka C'EST ARRIVE PRES DE CHEZ VOUS (which translates to IT HAPPENED IN YOUR TOWN).

Benoit is a charming, likeable killer who takes a camera crew through a typical day of killing while discussing music, art, poetry, etc. as the movie goes on, the crew helps him out from helping him dump the bodies to partaking in a rape scene. we also learn that he has made a few enemies in his line of work, so it is really no surprise that he meets a violent demise at the end. of course, as the crew slowly becomes as bad as Benoit, one feels little sympathy when they are gunned down as well. in all a VERY odd, yet entertaining in a very twisted way as the film satirizes how the media makes serial killers almost icons. just wondering who here saw it and what did they think?
