okay. i've found out a lot of information about this one. its not new. as i see it i think you have to reinstall Daz. I saw one guy who had to reinstall his OS but i believe he was overdoing it. you want to try this update first:

http://www.daz3d.com/i/support/downloads?product=studio&_m=d also there is a chance that once fixed any scenes or models created or worked on while the error was occurring will no longer be accessible...which is a damn shame because i really liked your worked. I'm going to do a bit more digging cause i think i am close to finding out exactly what it is. I myself have had problems such as this when using certain downloaded content from other 3D creators (unintentional i'm sure) luckily in this case former Daz files will still be accessible once the 3rd party content is removed.

that's all for now. more news at 11. and thanks for not giving up.
