Hi guys.

I just made my yearly check-in and honestly I was a bit shocked. Forget about updating without a good reason, some people are posting without a good reason!

One of the pictures on the top 9 of the week is a woman's face pasted onto a well-known Adam Hughes statue. And the guy didn't even make the siple background, he literally took the first image that comes up on Google for "x-men symbol".

It's not my decision to say if something with minimal effort can be posted, though they should probably credit others in this case. But I do remember people here who would spend hours on an image and get bummed when they missed out on the front page (although that does seem a little crazy).

Maybve we're just living in the future now and nobody cares... since the robot-monkeys took over...
