Chillyplasma, I really only had time to read the first few posts here. I have to say that HM has done wonders for me. I've met some really great people here, they gave me advice, friendship, goofed off with me in the chat and flirted with me. I've loved all of it.

I do have to admit that life did take over and due to the structure of the site I stopped checking it. Mostly because I can't directly reply to someone and the gallery organization.

This could be updated though and I don't think the site has to fail. It can be saved. I personally do not have the skills to do so but I do have friends that could magic this site to becoming a powerhouse. Even if it is just for us. But they would have to be paid, which is the problem.

Personally for very cheep I would love to do some tutorials, I like teaching and have gotten better. (Sorry Bio for my redraw forever ago I got carried away). The problem with free tutorials is just that I get asked how to paint, which involves a LOT of information that I've learned over my life. More specific things are more doable though.

All in all I really love this community, they have been wonderful and I am proud to be a part of it and call the people here friends.
