All I want to say on the matter is that there is always one person like him on every site on the net. It's as if people like him feel a sense of entitlement with things and in this case it's websites that they feel are "theirs" and others are ruining it for "them." They bitch and moan about how things don't go their way until they make idle threats that they are leaving only to come back again six or seven times and start complaining and making up things all over again. If I had a dollar for every time I've seen this kind of behavior, I'd have no shortage of cash!
