I liked it. I will probably buy it... but what I really liked was the fact that they kept it true to form with him creating his own web shooters. That in itself made the movie.

yeah. that's about all in the movie that was true to form. they changed everything. i had no problem with them giving peter's persona an upgrade. i had no problem with the lizard. i even had no problem with the shortened roles of uncle ben and aunt may [who needs 'em anyways]. but no j. jonah jameson? no daily bugle? c'mon. how can you have a movie without spidey's #1 nemesis? and what's with gwen stacey..a bio-tech genius? and what was worse of all was everyone knowing spidey's secret identity. but then that seemed to be a trend in the previous spiderman movies. everytime you turned around he was pulling his mask off..like he didn't care who saw him. the second spiderman movie was the worse especially that train scene. imean c'mon. he pulls his mask off then jumps on the front of a train that's speeding through the whole city. and what was worse was after he passed out and woke up with all the passengers staring down at him..the first thing the jackass does is reach for his face like he's shocked they see him. lol. what's the point of even wearing it? anyways. the best part about the new movie was the fight scenes..other than that i doubt i'll ever watch it again.
