hey Heromorphites,

it's been awhile. how are we doing. last summer I read a TIME article about authors and their view on fanfiction. some authors like them because they might think it's flattering that the reader likes their universe enough to create their own tales on it.

of course, there are those who are not fond of fanfiction because they might view it as some sort of invasion or copyright infringement (although the first thing a fanfic author does is give credit to the source) here are a few authors who fall in each category:

AUTHORS WHO LIKE FANFICTION

JK Rowling (Harry Potter)
Neil Gaiman (Eternals)
Stephen King
Anne McCafferey (Dragonriders of Pern)

AUTHORS WHO DISLIKE FANFICTION

Orson Scott Card (Ender's Game)
Ann Rice (Interview With a Vampire)
George RR Martin (Game of Thrones, Sandkings)

I wonder where Suzanne Collings (Hunger Games) might fall. just wondering. thoughts?
