You know I have no issues with a black Captain America, in fact there's a kid running around in Marvel with...SUPER SOLDIER SERUM...in his veins who would be perfect for the job...Sam could just be good at being Falcon. As for Thor...why make him unworthy? He was ruler of Asgard right? It would be a simple thing to have a huge contest in all of Asgard to find another worthy to take his place in Midgard while his Royal responsibilities require his undivided attention. They could have done a huge promo and stretched it out for several issues without making one of their most beloved heroes a bum. A Valkyrie could have stepped up and took the mantle nobody would freaking mind and they'd have their GIRL THOR (like there wasn't already one she's still alive BTW) Disney and the writers at Marvel in general are out of original ideas and their new ones suck balls...they should start looking for folks whose only talent is that they have good ideas...maybe they're not a good writer but they have the ability to come up with a solid concept that the writers can flesh out...You know an idea man...but that would be too much like right.
