Although that classic gen 3 Aiko continues to maintain some level of popularity, DW makes a valid point. Aiko is not as well supported as it once was. Genesis comes included with Daz Studio and apparently the latest version will autofit those old Aiko 3 clothes to Genesis. Personally I do a bit of modelling and while I have made some conforming clothes, it's thanks to DS's new one command auto-rigging. It does not work with older generations though. I don't know how to rig and create conforming clothes from scratch (yet). I would say that money might be better spent investing in the Aiko gen 4 morph for Genesis: <http://www.daz3d.com/a4-and-h4-for-genesis> It would open many more possibilities and probably make your life a little easier too.
