The sappy is just part of the story. You're not going to have a good episode if all you have is daredevil kicking butt the whole show. It's called "character development". Much like "The Walking Dead" wouldn't be any good if it was just an hour of taking down zombies.

I really like what they've done with Kingpin. The back story is a little stereotypical, but this is by far, a better casting job than the lame Affleck flick. I especially like the little nervous ticks and the delusion of the character.

My biggest gripe about the series is the costume... not the fledgeling DD black costume, but the red and black he gets by (SPOILER!!!!) episode 13. To me, there's just too much black in the costume, particularly in the mask. Overall though, it looks good, just black where it shouldn't be.
