Well this was just a disappointment. This challenge had potential and what did we get? Three entries. THREE. THREE!!

Now that's just a damned shame. All these members... and its the same three that are constantly participating. This is what I was talking about with the decline in activity. Seems like nobody wants to do things any more.

damned shame.... It's upsetting really. When the rest of us put forth the effort, we expect to see more... but we don't.

Well, my apologies for my own lack of participation. I definitely wanted to do a piece for this challenge. Unfortunately I was away for the month and there was no way I could put together what I wanted for this challenge on a laptop on the road during vacation. I really think this was an awesome idea for a challenge however, at least for me, taking on the classics would be a time consuming and daunting task. It would take me at least a month! Congrats to you, DI as well as B and DD on the terrific job you all did! I think you all did an outstanding job on this! Still, when I look at this field of participants, I see a high skill level among all. I don't think you should be so disappointed, DI. This challenge was particularly challenging and I think the commitment and skill required to meet that challenge is what narrowed the field so much. It was a good challenge with good entries though it is a shame there weren't more.
