I was going to, sarcastically, say... hey, what about me? And then I looked... it has been over 2 years since my last post. DOH!!!

Good luck to all!!!

AND PEOPLE.....VOTE!

Damn, Jr... Now I'm thinkin' I'm so wishing I had thought to do a collage of white rectangles called the Best of the No-shows!

...but I did give you a slight nod. Though your name didn't make the artists list, your character Killer Bee (drawn by Taz) made my Best of Original Characters piece.

i dunno guys. I'm having a tough time with this one. I never really approached this challenge like it was a contest and find it hard to judge it that way either but rather more of an artist tribute similar to the Inspiration Maps we did a while back. Not to sound snooty but basically all these are the same [save for pijon who broke his down to categories] and most of them have the same images. while i did vote for one i easily could have picked any of them. So why the rant? No reason i suppose, just wanted some attention since I cant post any artwork for a while.

Fantastic job not only to everyone who participated but also to all the great artists whose works were chosen.

I agree that everybody did a terrific job on this one! I do see what you're saying , Star. I definitely think this one was more about tribute and gallery pride and less about competition. I certainly wasn't doing this to try to do this to win and in many ways, thought this the opposite of a competition since it seemed that for all the participants, it was more about paying tribute to others. I think of the vote as just part of how all the challenges are done but I can see how you would view them all as similar though I must say that I always have a hard time picking my vote for every challenge poll. Still, while I thought we all mostly approached this the same way and I really enjoyed being reminded of all those great pics in every entry, there was one, that for me, took a little more thoughtful and original approach to the challenge (certainly not mine!) than the rest so the decision is personally a little easier than usual but I can see your dilemma too.
